Russell Says Votes Lacking to Gag South

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Richard B. Russell, leader of Southern forces, declared today that Senate leaders "do not now have the votes to gag us" with cloture in the civil rights debate.

Nor, he added, have the Dixie senators fighting the bill been able to muster the one-third support needed to block a move to limit debate.

Thus he indicated that if a cloture vote were taken now, the outcome would depend on the undetermined positions of a handful of senators.

"There are four or five votes we don't know where they're going," the Georgia Democrat said in an interview.

It takes two-thirds of the senators present and voting to shut off prolonged debate with cloture. This would mean 67 if all 100 senators were recorded.

Republican senators had their third caucus on the measure Friday. Afterward GOP supporters of the civil rights bill said they thought they would have enough votes, with the Democrats, to invoke cloture when the showdown comes.

But various senators had different estimates of how many GOP votes would be needed. And both Republican and Democratic proponents said they are counting on President Johnson to win over the few senators still on the fence.

Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said he doubted whether a cloture move could be made before the second week in June. But he said the Senate would have to finish work on the bill in June because of a large backlog of work.

And less than two months away is the Republican National Convention which opens July 13 in San Francisco.

For only the third Saturday since the debate began March 9, the Senate did not meet today.

Leaders have sharply eased the pressure on floor sessions while they concentrated on closed-door efforts to wrap up a package of amendments which they hope will produce the needed cloture votes.

These efforts have run into some difficulties, but both Democratic and Republican leaders said they were confident the proposed changes would be in shape to introduce formally next week.

They agreed, however, that there would be no floor action during the week, largely because of an expected high rate of absenteeism. The Senate will recess from Thursday to the following Monday for a long Memorial Day weekend.

Hawkins Hurls Foe a Challenge

MORRILTON, Ark. (AP) — Sheriff Marlin Hawkins has challenged former newspaper editor Gene Wirges to a public debate "on the true political issues of Conway County."

Wirges has accepted the challenge.

The challenge came in a recent speech by Hawkins at Arkansas Tech College at Russellville.

Wirges said he also would welcome a public or private meeting with Gov. Orval E. Faubus about conditions in Conway County.

"I believe both would be useful to our state," Wirges said.

Requests for Ship Mu sic Vary

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — Those who go down to the sea in ships these days — and under it in submarines — include Brahms, Puccini, Andre Kostelanetz, Tony Bennett and Margaret Whiting.

These, said G. W. Mendenhall, are popular requests on the 250,000 feet of stereo music he has taped as gifts for submarines of the Polaris fleet.

Mendenhall, senior administrator at Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., got the idea on learning that the Polaris submarine Theodore Roosevelt had a high-fidelity tape system.

Mendenhall recorded 30 hours of music for that sub. He's been at it ever since.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — If the chefs at Orly Field read before they reach, English aquariums may get their live Alaska king crabs.

Part of last month's shipment wound up on the menu at the Paris airport when a chef found them resting between flights in a cooler.

The dozen big crabs due there today rode in containers carefully marked in English and French: "Please avoid eating."

Laos Loss Gives Area Red Fever

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Communist victory in Laos would be a virus in the intestines of all Southeast Asia. Soon the whole area would have a Red fever. This country is now considering action to stop it. It's easy to see why.

Landlocked Laos, about the size of Britain, is right in the stomach of Southeast Asia. It has 1.8 million people, mostly illiterate, and with a life expectancy of 40 years.

Most of them, living in hamlets scattered by mountains and jungles, have never heard of democracy or communism.

There are no railroads, no highways in the modern sense. Few roads are suitable for cars or trucks.

Travel is by jungle path or plane. Communication is mostly by mouth or foot. Laos has fewer than 1,000 telephones. But it's the way it's landlocked that could be fatal to its neighbors.

It has frontiers with Red China, Red North Viet Nam, South Viet Nam which this country is helping fight communism, Burma, Cambodia, and Thailand. The only major neighbor it doesn't touch is Malaysia.

Because of the mountains and jungles no traditional war of big armies could be fought there. Its made to order for small-scale and specialized guerrilla operations which the Communists have been perfecting for years.

Even if the Communists were crushed and driven out, they probably couldn't be kept out. Small bands could go back in by jungle path from North Viet Nam. Yet, from the description just given, Laos by itself is no attraction.

But once Laos became Red, pressure on already besieged South Viet Nam would increase and the pressure on Burma, Thailand and Cambodia would begin. All of them would mean land, people, and rice bowls for Red China and North Viet Nam.

The pressure of a Red Laos on its neighbors would get its greatest initial boost from this: U.S. prestige and confidence in its help against communism would suffer disastrously in Southeast Asia and, perhaps, in the general world.

Why is the United States mixed up in Southeast Asia at all? There are two reasons, one idealistic, although the Communists would probably hoot at this, and the other very practical.

The idealistic reason — to help people in small, weak or backward countries to work out their own destiny before communism can try to gobble them.

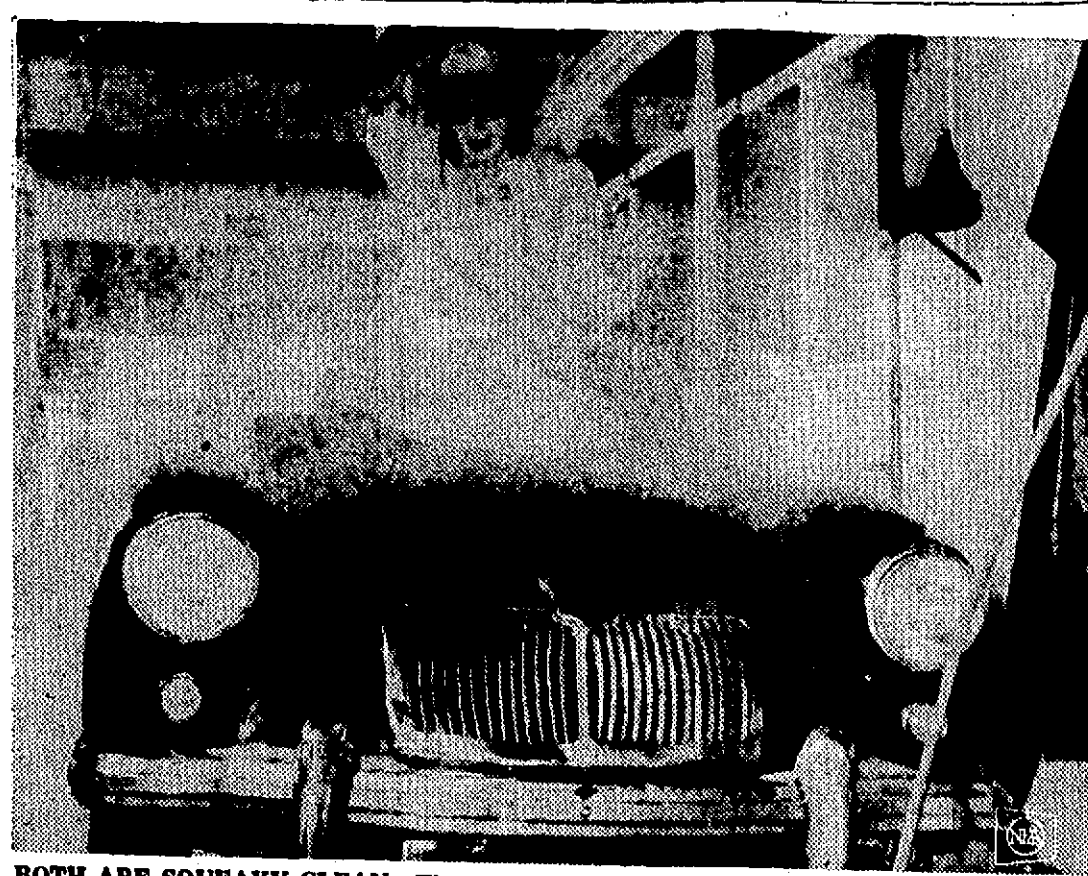

The practical reason — nobody gave it better than the late secretary of state, John Foster Dulles, when he said in 1954 about defending Indo-China: "Any significant expansion of the Communist world would indeed be a danger to the United States because international communism thinks in terms of ultimately using its power position against the United States."

"Therefore Communist armed aggression in Southeast Asia would in fact endanger our peace and security and call for counteraction on our part."

President Eisenhower put it another way, with a now well-worn analogy: If one Southeast Asian country fell to communism, other free nations would then fall like stacked dominoes.

But something else would be endangered: The confidence of the American allies in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization. These — Britain, France, the Philippines, Thailand, Pakistan, Australia, New Zealand — signed a pact in 1954.

Since 1954, when the French who used to use Laos as a hunting preserve pulled out, the United States has given the Laotians about $500 million in aid, most of it for defense. But in these years the Communists have grown stronger.

Co-education Was Moot Issue in 1888 When Hope Female College Chartered

By Mary Anita Laseter
Star Feature Writer

Co-education was a moot question in Hope in 1881 when the Hope Female College was in existence on Fulton Street between 4th and 5th Streets. It had been chartered in 1888 and was a girl's school, but boys under the age of 14 were permitted to attend through the spring of 1891.

Operated by the Ouachita Presbytery, in '91 it became devoted exclusively to the education of females, and according to an announcement at that time, many "hail with delight the return to the good old method of separate female education."

There was a reason for this, of course.

"Each returning fall witnesses trainloads of young ladies, daughters of Arkansas and Texas, going back to the older states to secure for themselves the advantages of separate female education that are not to be obtained at home. It was this want of a home-school that led the citizens of Hope to establish this college, and it should be the pride of every Southerner to aid in sustaining it."

In 1891-92, the trustees were: C. A. Bridwell, president; Judge H. G. Bunn, the Rev. E. M. Monroe, Capt. W. D. Lieper, Dr. W. B. Foster, vice-president; the Rev. J. C. Williams, the Rev. J. S. VanMeter, James S. Wilson, and the Rev. A. J. Cheatham, secretary and treasurer.

The enrollment in 1890 was 166, but there were only four girls in the spring graduating class. They were Kate Jones (Mrs. Floyd Porterfield of Hope) Cora Herron (Pye) who later moved to El Dorado, Rebecca Hinton (McKinney) who moved to Little Rock, and Kate Jamison (Mrs. Sid Henry), deceased who was Society Editor of the Hope Star many years.

As for the religious aspects of education in those days, federal rulings weren't in effect, or needed, and each pupil attended the Sabbath-school and church selected by her parents.

At the school itself the prospectus for the year 1891-92 declared: "This is a Christian country. The Bible is the keystone of the arch of American Liberty. Education without the Bible means infidelity; and infidelity means social, religious and political death."

"The object of all investigation is Truth. The Bible is the source and compend of Truth. While no bigotry, no sectarianism, no denominationalism will be allowed, yet the truths of the Bible will be intermingled with everything we teach."

Teacher Upheld in Court Fight

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The State Board of Education has upheld the appeal of a school teacher fired on charges involving class procedure and for calling pupils "wall-to-wall idiots."

The board held Thursday that Howard Weld, a science teacher at Stockbridge until his dismissal March 23, must be paid for his present contract which runs for the rest of the year.

Dormitory Bids Are Received

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Pickens-Bond Construction Co. of Little Rock submitted an apparent low bid of $1,349,715 Thursday to build a dormitory complex for 263 men and 163 women at Arkansas AM&N College here.

Arthur Arney Co. of Pine Bluff apparently had the low bid at $334,000 on construction of a 15-unit faculty apartment building, additions to the student union and remodeling of two dormitories.

Opposes Any Change in Constitution

By DON MCKEE

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Northern Baptists overwhelmingly approved a resolution today opposing any constitutional change to provide for prayers in public schools. Southern Baptists split over the same issue.

Delegates to the Northern Baptist convention, in addition to endorsing the current wording of the First Amendment, voted down a proposal urging Congress to take any necessary steps to provide for Bible reading and nonsectarian prayers in the schools on a voluntary basis.

The Southern Baptists, holding a separate convention here, argued over whether schools should engage in nonsectarian religious services.

Messengers to the convention first affirmed in a close vote, "the historic rights of our schools to engage voluntarily on a nonsectarian basis in prayer, in Bible reading and other devotional exercises as may be desired."

But the Southern Baptists then voted to reconsider and delayed final action.

Dr. Ruben Alley of Richmond, Va., opposed the resolution, saying that by it, "You're saying you would authorize agents of the state to come in and set up religious service."

He said school teachers were agents of the state and that such action could lead to a government religion.

The resolution, introduced by the Rev. Levering Evans of Richmond, Va., also was opposed by Dr. E. S. James of Dallas, Tex.

"Baptists do not have to impose the government to allow them to pray," Dr. James said. The resolution virtually nullifies another proposal offered by the convention's public affairs committee, he said.

The committee affirmed support for "the concept and the vocabulary of the First Amendment." It urged in its resolution that Congress leave the First Amendment unchanged.

The Southern Baptists rejected Thursday an endorsement of church integration and left the issue to their local churches.

The American Baptist Convention—Northern—was considering a resolution calling for members to participate in demonstrations and support the civil rights bill.

Providence to Hold Revival

Providence Memorial Baptist Church, Perrytown, will be engaged in revival services May 28-31, with services nightly at 7:30. The Rev. John Henry Carlton of Rossion will bring the messages. Singing will be under the direction of Ralph Callicott.

New Reason Business Is Healthy

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Peekers into the future have new reason today to see everything coming up rosy. Some of the most reliable business indicators of things to come are taking on healthier glows after a period of hesitation.

Factory orders for durable goods took a big jump in April to a record high of $20.6 billion, a 7 per cent climb in one month. Although shipments also set a record, the orders poured in at such a rate that the backlog of unfilled orders advanced to $49 billion. That all but guarantees busy schedules for many factories for weeks and even months to come.

A happy factor in the flow of orders as spring got going is that it marks a rebound from two months of retreat from the previous peak in January. The February and March trend had given the prognosticators pause. Many feared that the upsurge in the economy in the final weeks of 1963 might be leveling off, or worse.

New orders strengthen earlier reports that industrial production as a whole was climbing and employment increasing more than seasonally. The record order backlog should keep output on the upgrade for May and probably June.

At the consumer level the prospects are bright, too. Personal income has risen to a new high of $483.1 billion, at an annual rate. Business translates this into more spendable dollars to be tapped for finished goods or for services.

Cash dividend payments rose to $1.13 billion in April, 9 per cent more money than stockholders got in the like 1963 month.

Merchants have come to watch dividend payments as an index to what to expect, or hope for, since many happy recipients spend them quickly at the stores. Retailers of luxury goods often are the greatest beneficiaries of this windfall.

Others are the recreation and travel industries, and purveyors of personal services.

Housing starts are drooping a bit. Permits for future construction also slumped a little in April.

But housing experts warn that the industry is a tricky one, with month to month changes the rule and trends hard to spot. Some federal authorities have been expecting a slowdown in home construction, and especially apartment building, after the big spurt last year. Vacancies in many communities have been mounting, cooling the ardor of builders.

The consumer is still spending for other things, however. And the competition for his dollar is keen.

LBJ Training Sights on a Grand Slam

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon Baines Johnson, today six months in the presidency, is reported to be training his sights on a grand-slam victory at the polls in November — 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Johnson, who stepped out of the background Nov. 22 to grasp the torch of government from the fallen John F. Kennedy, often talks—Texas style—about "standing tall."

Friends say he hopes to stand taller on the political horizon in another six months than any other president in U.S. history.

And like the army of other politicians, small and mighty, Johnson intends to stand on his record.

He has, in this half-year from autumn to spring, labored like a mule to try to whip the New Frontier legislative program through Congress — but emblazoned with the fresh LBJ brand.

A dedicated poll watcher, Johnson is very much aware that a recent Gallup poll credits him with greater popularity than President Franklin D. Roosevelt enjoyed in May 1936.

That was the year FDR carried every state except Maine and Vermont, rolling up a landslide record that still stands.

Johnson calls Roosevelt his "second daddy," but being a man who likes to stand all he intends to do his "dead level best"—a pet Johnson phrase—to beat that record.

If this sounds audacious, the President is not one to sell himself short. Woven into the record of his first six months in office is a never-say-die spirit.

As leader of Senate Democrats in the 1950s, Johnson's strong point was an ability to compromise the views of opposing factions and fashion coalitions capable of enacting major legislation. In fact, his emphasis on compromise was so marked that, at times, disgruntled Democrats labeled him "lying down Lyndon."

As President, Johnson has been a different kind of leader. Time and again, he has refused to take no for an answer.

When Congress has defeated or pigeonholed important administration bills, he has insisted on another vote. This has been true of measures to raise the pay of federal executives, to finance the International Development Association, to extend the food stamp plan, to provide price supports for wheat growers. And when the House voted last December for a foreign aid rider aimed at thwarting wheat sales to the Soviet Union, Johnson won a reversal.

Sometimes it seems that Johnson believes all things are possible if the presidential will is steadfast.

Certainly this was true of his approach to the five-year-old dispute that threatened a national rail strike. While some advisers warned that Johnson would risk injury to his prestige by committing the force of the presidency to a hopeless cause, he went ahead and staged last-ditch negotiations in the White House. He got the settlement.

The rail agreement was widely regarded as something of a miracle. So, too, was enactment of the biggest tax cut in history.

When Johnson took office, it seemed quite possible the Senate would take many, many months to act on tax legislation. Johnson broke the logjam by undercutting opposition with a much-publicized economy in government program.

Complains About Missile Fragments

HONOLULU (AP) — A farmer complained Thursday that fragments from a Nike-Hercules missile were strewn over his farm Wednesday after the missile had to be blown up because of a malfunction.

The Hawaii Army National Guard has been conducting training firings of the weapon each Wednesday on Oahu Island.

"This is dangerous stuff," said Robert McCandless whose farm east of Kahuku is a mile from the guard launch pad.

"Somebody might get killed," Jagged pieces of metal hit the farm after the missile exploded at 4,000 feet over the north end of the island. The McCandless children were kept busy picking up the pieces, all sharp-edged and some the size of a garbage can cover.

Discusses Freedom of the Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Benjamin M. McKelway, a leading figure in American journalism for many years, says "freedom of the press means freedom from all regulations save those self-imposed by responsible self-restraint."

"The concept—in any form—of a referee or policeman, sitting in judgment upon the performance of the press and seeking to enforce that judgment is fundamentally opposed to the concept of press freedom," he said.

McKelway, editorial chairman of the Washington Star and former president of The Associated Press, delivered the sixth Pulitzer Memorial lecture Thursday at the Columbia Graduate School of Journalism.

He said that under the constitutional guarantee of a free press, newspapers are not licensed and are in a category different from that of television and radio.

Neutralists in Laos Seeking Big 3 Aid

By RON WILSON

DETROIT (AP) — Auto maker Henry Ford II says he will support President Johnson for reelection no matter whom the Republicans nominate.

Ford, board chairman of the Ford Motor Co., said Friday his vote for Johnson would be his first for a Democratic presidential candidate.

His endorsement was given to Johnson during the President's brief stopover in Detroit.

Ford described Johnson as "terrific" and predicted the President would have no trouble winning in November.

"He's doing an excellent job as President," Ford said. "I've heard him say many times that he's for all the people in the country — for business, labor and the general public. I agree with what he says."

Ford's comments were made as Johnson shook hands with politicians and some of the 25,000 people who greeted him at Detroit Metropolitan Airport. The President stopped briefly en route to deliver the University of Michigan commencement address at Ann Arbor.

Johnson told the crowd: "This welcome moves me to recall an old song—'Will You Love Me in November as You do in May?'"

"I don't want you to forget me later on in the fall," he added.

Gov. George W. Romney, a Republican who has been mentioned as possible GOP presidential timber, served as official greeter.

Some Democrats seemed miffed at Romney's appearance, saying he invited himself. Republican sources said the committee which planned the airport program had bypassed Romney and that he had to contact the White House to arrange a spot in line.

Detroit Free Press reporter Frank Beckman obtained the Ford interview and his paper copyrighted the story. Ford later made his comments available to other newsmen.

Ford and his brothers, Benson and William, generally have been considered Republicans. But the Congressional Quarterly reported that the three Ford brothers contributed $15,000 to Democratic coffers in 1962.

Ford described himself Friday as an independent.

'Trouble's' Didn't Cause Trouble

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — An 8-year-old Jersey cow named "Trouble" didn't cause any, but that was no help to the mayors of Little Rock and North Little Rock in a milking contest Thursday.

Mayor Casey Laman of North Little Rock, noting that "you have to have a lot of pull to get a head in this business," dampened the bottom of the pail.

Mayor Byron Morse of Little Rock took his stance while another official commented: "We'll have to jack this cow up to get a bucket under her."

Morse proved he was no milking champion.

It was part of ceremonies opening the Arkansas Dairy Festival.

Wants Johnson Regardless of GOP Selection

By TONY ESCODA

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — The beleaguered neutralist government of Laos is seeking military and economic aid from the United States, Britain and France to stem the swelling tide of communism.

Premier Souvanna Phouma made the announcement Friday as U.S. jets continued their reconnaissance flights over Lao territory held by the pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces.

One plane — a Navy RF8 Crusader jet — was hit by Pathet Lao ground fire but made it back to an American carrier in the South China Sea. U. S. sources in Washington said the plane had been slightly damaged and the pilot was uninjured.

U.S. officials indicated that the flights would continue, gathering information on Pathet Lao military movements as well as serving as a warning to the Communists of American determination in Southeast Asia.

In Washington there were new indications that the United States is preparing to expand its military role in Southeast Asia if Communist pressures does not ease on Laos and South Viet Nam.

U.S. officials said they had not yet received the Laotian request for help but disclosed the unarmed jet reconnaissance planes had been sent aloft Thursday at Souvanna's request.

Souvanna told newsmen that "we are going to ask aid from France, the United States and Britain — both military and economic — for the defense of the country's unity. We are now in the process of establishing our needs."

The United States withdrew its military advisor from Laos guaranteeing the independence guaranteeing the independence and neutrality of the little landlocked kingdom under a coalition government of rightists, neutralists and pro-Communists.

"The coalition has never been able to establish effective rule, and the political tug-of-war has been reflected in the repeated clashes between the military arms of each faction."

There were no reports of any new fighting. The Pathet Lao forces, who drove the neutralist army from the Plaine des Jarres this week, appeared halted by monsoon rains.

Ridgeway Can't Find Attorney

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — E. T. Ridgeway said Thursday that no attorney has answered his plea for aid in a court test to challenge his disqualification as a candidate for governor of Arkansas.

Ridgeway, of Norfolk and Newport, Ark., filed as a Democratic candidate for governor.

But Arkansas Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett ruled Ridgeway ineligible for the race because he was a convicted felon.

Ridgeway was convicted in 1955 of embezzling public funds while he was delinquent tax collector in Jackson County, Ark. He served 21-months prison sentence.

The Democratic Party announced after Bennett's decision that Ridgeway's $1,500 filing fee would be returned to him.

June 23 is the deadline for receiving names from the primary ticket. The Arkansas Supreme Court's summer recess is scheduled to begin June 1.

Lt. Gov. Nathan Gordon pardoned Ridgeway in 1959, restoring his rights, but Bennett held that running for office is a political—not a civil right — and cannot be restored.

Assignments in School Made

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Little Rock School Board made its assignment of Negro students Thursday to desegregated schools for next fall.

The list was withheld until parents are notified on report cards May 29.

The last four segregated grades in Little Rock's public school system are to be integrated in the fall.

Ted Lamb, a member of the school board, objected to the assignments, saying that voting on the assignment of 23,000 pupils with little discussion violated the Pupil Placement Act.

Squalus Sank 25 Years Ago Writer Recalls

EDITOR'S NOTE — Twenty-five years ago the submarine Squalus sank in the Atlantic off Portsmouth, N.H. The following story by a reporter who covered the events recaptures the tragedy and drama of the sinking, the rescue from the sea bottom of 33 men and the eventual raising of the craft which was to play a fighting role in World War II.

By JAMES CALOGERO

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP)—A small floral wreath will bob in the Atlantic 15 miles off Portsmouth on Saturday where a sea drama of life and death held a nation's attention exactly 25 years ago.

The submarine Squalus sank in 240 feet of water off the Isle of Shoals on May 23, 1939, with 37 Navy men and two civilians aboard.

It was to be many hours before a waiting nation would learn that 33 men were alive in two separate compartments of the 310-foot submarine.

And for two tense-filled days all attention focused on the spot in the Atlantic until 33 men who survived the disaster were brought to the surface in one of the great rescue feats of the sea.

Even the submarine itself eventually was brought to the surface in an historic salvage operation in what 25 years ago was the deepest water in which Navy divers ever operated.

Twenty-four years later — on April 10, 1963—the nuclear submarine Thresher passed the same spot en route to her own untimely death with 129 men, 220 miles at sea in more than 8,000 feet of water—also during a test dive.

Thresher never was recovered — and because of the extreme depth may never be.

The Squalus was raised, refitted and went off to World War II as the Sailfish. She acquitted herself well, torpedoing 45,029 tons of Japanese shipping in its Pacific patrols.

The wreath marking the 25th anniversary of the Squalus sinking will be tossed to the sea by a man who survived the sinking and later returned to her when she was rechristened Sailfish.

He is Gerald McLees of Portsmouth, now a civilian employee at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard and former electrician's mate on the Squalus. The anniversary tribute was arranged McLees relived the disaster for The Associated Press on the silver anniversary.

"We had left Portsmouth on Monday and anchored 15 miles out. On the next morning, May 23, I was in the three-foot crawl space of the forward battery room, taking cell readings.

"Allen Bryson was in the hatchway just above me with his headcut on so we could keep in touch with all other compartments—the normal practice on a submarine.

"We started the dive and had gone down about 50 feet in about 40 seconds when Bryson shouted to me 'The engine room's flooding!' It was 8:40 in the morning.

"I jumped up out of the battery section and headed for the forward torpedo room right behind Bryson. The submarine was going down stern first so we had to fight our way uphill.

"There was no big bang when we hit the bottom. The Squalus just slid backwards and we settled easily on the bottom."

McLees continued:

"We could hear the high-pressure air system trying to blow out the water ballast and enable us to surface. It was a losing battle.

"There were about a half-dozen people in the forward torpedo room when I got there. Others followed me. The rest of us who lived through it were in the control room.

"We in the forward section didn't know that 25 of our shipmates were dead in the after section. We didn't hear about it until we reached the surface a couple of days later."

In another part of the ship, the disaster was to hand Lloyd B. Maness a cruel duty. He was nearest the hatch which separated the flooding sections from the dry area. If he didn't shut that heavy metal door everybody on board might perish.

Maness waited until the last possible moment, permitting the passage of a few men soaked by the incoming sea water. Then, as water poured through the hatchway—and with not another second to wait.

Lt. Oliver F. Naquin, the Squalus commander, looking back to the tragic day in an interview at his Arlington, Va., home, said:

"There was no outer 'Nobody should 'Oh, my God!' or anything like that. Only one man mentioned the people aft, and I shut that off real fast.

"If one or two men had panicked, the whole thing might have gone up in smoke."

Squalus rescue operations were put under way from the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard within minutes after she failed to report by radio.

The salvage ship Falcon, carrying a 10-ton diving bell, left New London, Conn., and anchored over the Squalus the next day.

Navy divers operated from the Falcon to prepare the Squalus hatches to accept the diving bell so no water would get into the sub as the men left in small groups to be raised to the surface.

The first diver reached the Squalus at 9:15 a.m., May 24. The diving bell was lowered only four hours later.

The bell made four trips to the submarine to rescue all the survivors, but the final trip was fraught with danger and excitement.

The lines had frayed and become tangled and the last eight of the survivors and the diving bell's two operators were trapped for four hours between the Squalus on the bottom and the Falcon on the surface.

Next came the epic salvage. For two months Navy divers, working only short periods on the bottom because of the high pressure, tunneled away under the boat to make a passage for salvage chains.

Finally all was read and air was blown into the pontoons which were to pull the sub from the bottom.

The first lift came on the morning of July 13. All appeared to be going well. Suddenly, a great burst of foam erupted, and one of the pontoons shot out of the water, falling back with a splash just as another pontoon surfaced.

The sea bubbled and boiled. Churning foam spread in an ever widening circle.

In the midst of this confusion came a new eruption—the bow of the submarine shot out of the water then slowly settled to the bottom.

All the salvage work had been undone in a few, brief moments. The salvagers had to do it all over again. It took all summer.

Finally on Sept. 15, the submarine was towed to a drydock in the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard.

The bodies were removed from the after compartments. A Naval Court of Inquiry found that a faulty sea valve caused the sinking.

Two signers of the Declaration of Independence became U. S. Presidents: John Adams and Thomas Jefferson.

A Choice of Assassins

Malcolm turned and looked at her thoughtfully. He didn't quite dare trust himself now; each of his convictions must be drawn from the same poisoned well. He knew there was no freedom in Senator Quesada's smiling insanity. There was no freedom in releasing monsters in life; caging them was the trick. Of course, he could work for Senator Quesada. But he did not intend to embrace that kind of slavery.

Everyone had a choice of assassins in life, everyone was given the opportunity to choose the nature of his own destruction; but there must also be a choice of redemptions.

He knelt quickly beside Jenny and put a hand on her shoulder. "Listen to me. I can manage it. I'm sure of it. I'll take you to Lausanne tomorrow."

Zarren and Clarke and Jorge sat at the poker table.

Malcolm closed the door behind him and stood with his back to it.

Zarren glanced up from his cards and stared at Malcolm with no expression at all in his face or eyes. Then he put the cards down deliberately, and nodded to Clarke. The Englishman turned his gray face to the door, following Zarren's gaze, and when he saw Malcolm there, his eyes narrowed, and the smile that was like quicksilver flickered along his gray lips.

Jorge sat beside Domingo's large empty chair; he, too, put his cards down and sat watching Malcolm.

"I'd like a cold bottle of orange soda, please," Malcolm said. "You needn't bother to open it. I'll take it with me."

"Yes, of course, Senator," Malcolm picked up the cold wet bottle and walked back to the poker table and smiled at Domingo's empty chair. Finally he sat down and smiled around the table at Zarren and Jorge and Clarke.

Malcolm set the bottle of orange soda down on the wooden rim of the table. From his shirt pocket he took a small bullet with a hole pierced through it, and dropped it gently where it glinted sullenly under the bright lights.

"That's worth as much to me as the chips I see in front of you," he said. "Let's play for it."

Jorge started nervously.

"It's judgment day for you," Clarke said, and the curve of his smile was so soft and sensuous that it looked as if he was musing sweetly on exquisite pleasures which would soon thrill every nerve and fiber of his body. "You ruined us. And it's going to be our pleasure to pay you back."

Malcolm smiled at the chips on the table. "You'll be really poor before I leave," he said.

"They couldn't kill him, he realized with wonder; for it was suddenly apparent to him that these men craved fear as other men craved drugs or women or power. It had been Domingo's secret hold on them. And now they were longing for him to fill the vacuum created by that death."

Malcolm smiled and settled himself with a certain finality in Domingo's chair, and there was more than mere confidence and authority in his manner; there was the strong and dangerous implication that the chair belonged solely and rightfully to him.

"Deal!" he said quietly. Jorge looked imploringly at Clarke, and then, almost against his will, one of his hands moved compulsively toward the cards in the middle of the table.

"You killed Domingo," Clarke said in a savage whisper, but now his expression was slowly changing, too; there was bitterness and despair at first, but as he continued to stare helplessly at Malcolm, there was something very close to horror in his eyes.

"I didn't only kill Domingo," Malcolm said. "I killed you all."

Clarke put his hands over his face and Zarren sighed despairingly, as the cards flickered out from Jorge's trembling fingers. Malcolm's first three cards were aces, and he began to laugh because he knew he would be home before Jenny's bottle of orange soda lost its chill.

And hearing him laugh, and seeing the pleasure in his face, some of the fishermen laughed

Presidency No Place for a Timid Soul

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The presidency," the man said, "is no place for a timid soul or a torpid spirit." Later, he added this: "I strive to please."

The man is Lyndon B. Johnson, who will be in the White House six months Friday. He's been neither timid nor torpid. Anything but.

And he's been so anxious to please he has acted like a one-man rescue squad for anything that ails the country.

He's been the bounciest president since Theodore Roosevelt and more willing to stick his neck out than any president since Harry S. Truman.

He went into the heart of the segregation country — Atlanta — to make a speech on civil rights and was almost mobbed by happy Georgians.

He promised to shut down needless military bases and got surprisingly little bad reaction, although if there's anything a congressman doesn't like it is a base shut down in his district.

He asked business and labor leaders to dinner at the White House — but not at the same time — and asked the former to keep down prices and the latter to keep down wage demands.

Both groups liked him, although this doesn't mean they'll do what he asked. This week the AFL-CIO said it wouldn't.

It's in trying to please that he outdid himself, if that's possible.

You're old He's pushing a health care program. You're poor He has an antipoverty program. You need money He got Congress to approve a tax cut. You like to travel He hopes to have a man on the moon by 1970.

You're a woman He's made a production of putting women in good government jobs. You want more pay He's asked Congress to broaden the minimum wage law and in some cases require double-time pay for overtime.

He even thought of people who like big muscles. He has a physical fitness program with Stan Musial, a baseball great, in charge. Or maybe you're a tightwad who wants tightwads in government. He's thought of that, too.

He cut the budget and goes around turning out White House lights to save on electricity, although he's probably running up the biggest presidential telephone bill in history, calling people to get on the ball.

He uses the telephone like a third arm. He gets little sleep, works day and night, and, so the rumor goes, holds his friends up by the ears to get things done.

No president in memory has kept reporters panting so far trying to keep up with him, on foot, on wheels and on paper.

In one spurt he made 3 speeches in two weeks. He traveled the Appalachian trail twice, visited the World's Fair and shook hands with White House tourists. He dances as long as there's a woman left standing at White House shindigs, and holds news conferences on the spur of the moment or while trotting six times around his garden.

With all that said, the next question is: How's he doing? Fine, from all accounts. He's riding so high in popularity polls the Republicans, in this presidential election year, seem to have had some of the steam taken out of them.

Perhaps his greatest single-handed achievement — in the sense of working at it personally — was getting the rail dispute settled. It had seemed impossible but the result electrified him. Then he really started walking and talking.

If knowing how to deal with members of Congress helps a president, Johnson ought to set a record. He was in Congress himself 24 years, a longer service than any president before taking office. And he's working at it.

He has had success on some things — like a tax cut, a farm program, a foreign aid bill he could live with — but all the big tests lie ahead, at home and abroad, and the country should know far more about him by election time.

His major programs are still hung up in Congress, like civil rights and health care. His problems abroad haven't been back-breaking so far but they may become so soon, particularly in Southeast Asia.

too, and Pepe began to pour drinks again. The piano player hurried back to his chair.

Malcolm pulled in the chips. He picked up the bullet and studied it with a faint smile. Then he flipped it from him. The sound it made when striking the floor was small and unimportant almost lost in the laughter and music in the room.

"DEAR ABBY"

DON'T BE PETTY!

By Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: Who is supposed to give the corsage on Mother's Day? The husband or the children? I married a widow, and on the first Mother's Day after our marriage, I sent her a lovely corsage. Her son sent her one, too. (This happens to be the first thing this son of her's ever gave her besides trouble.) Well, she must have thought more of her son's corsage than she did of mine, because she wore HIS, and left mine home in the ice box. I was very hurt although I didn't say anything but the next year on Mother's Day I didn't send her a corsage and neither did her son. She was sulking all week. Do you blame me for not sending her a corsage after what happened to mine last year?

HUSBAND
Dear Husband: Posies on Mother's Day mean less than understanding and love the other 364 days of the year.

Dear Abby: I am 26 years old and am in love with a married man who is 33. He married very young, and has one child. I have been in love with him for six years and seven months. When I met him he told me that his marriage was all washed up, so I had nothing to do with his miserable situation at home. He says as soon as his little boy is able to take care of himself he will get a divorce and marry me. His son is in the second grade now. I get awfully tired of waiting, Abby, and I'm not sure I could ever love another man. Can you give me some good advice?

MIXED UP
Dear Mixed: Yes, lose him. The chances you're taking aren't worth taking the chance you have of marrying this man. And if you CAN love a man other than another woman's husband, you had better find it out while you're still in the 20's.

Dear Abby: Speaking of naming children unusual names: I once heard of a woman who named her three daughters, Pearl, Sapphire and Onyx. The first had a skin as smooth and white as a pearl. The second had eyes that shone like two sapphires. And the third was "onyx-pected."

CARL ON BASSON ST.
Dear Carl: Thank you for your contribution to my collection of unusual names. Where were YOU when vaudeville died?

Dear Abby: In November of 1958 I wrote asking your advice about my husband, who cheated on me, beat me up and refused to take the responsibilities of a husband and father. At the time I had only one child. Today I have five and I am kicking myself because I didn't take your advice. You said, "Don't take him back until he has proved he can stay away from other women, treat you with respect and hold a job." Well, each time I took him back I got pregnant. He continued to cheat on me and slap me around, pregnant or not. He also lost one job

Says a Contract Is a Contract

MORRILTON, Ark. (AP)—A contract is a contract, said land-scaping contractor Johnnie Jones of Morrilton about a lawn he sold two years ago on time payments. When the payments weren't met, he cut the sod into chunks and hauled the lawn away in his truck.

Will Force Union to Open Books

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today it will go into court to force the Teamsters Union to open its books for an investigation of funds spent to defend Teamsters President James R. Hoffa in his long series of criminal trials.

The union has refused to answer administrative subpoenas issued by the Labor Department under the 1959 Landrum-Griffin labor-management reporting and disclosure law.

Labor Department Solicitor Charles Donahue said the matter has been turned over to the Justice Department which will take it into District Court.

Donahue said the courts have upheld the right of the Labor Department to subpoena union financial records.

The precedent was set about a year ago, in a case involving the Teamsters, Donahue said. The U.S. Court of Appeals upheld the Labor Department and the Supreme Court refused a union request for a review.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz on May 11 announced the investigation into the use of Teamsters funds for Hoffa's legal expenses, at the request of 16 members of Philadelphia duced.

"BLESSED ARE THEY..."

As the little birds trust the mother bird, so let men trust God. If a sparrow cannot fall without God's attention, if He counts the hairs of our head... why do we fear (Mat. 10:29-31)? Worry about future security? God is the security for those who trust Him. Your Heavenly Father feeds the birds, and you are of far more value than they (Mat. 6:26). "Blessed are they who hunger for God's good things; they shall be filled." In childhood we needed mother and welcomed her... as adults we need God and ignore Him. In prosperity we forget God, the Bible, the church; but when disaster comes we want them all.

As your days so shall your strength be (Deut. 33:25). He will cover you with His feathers, and under His wings shall you trust (Psalms 91:4). Then why not trust God where you cannot see; the plan is His, the promise yours. "Blessed are they."

You In The Church...
The Church In You

Form a combination for good. We should attend church regularly. Every man, woman and child needs the influence of the CHURCH. Be faithful. Be a Churchman!
